MR. AND MRS. HARVEY MACPHERSON, JR. Reception After Ceremony Is At Confederation Centre

A double ring ceremony was performed at Zion P. R. S. by the Rev. Donald Campbell and Rev. Donald S. Moore, brother of the bride. The bride's gown was floor length, empire style, of white tulle and lace, with matching train and lily point sleeves. Her waist-length veil was lace and of Spanish style. She carried a white Bible, covered with a bouquet and streamers of white, yellow and pink sweatshirt roses.

Doreen Balderston, as maid of honor, was gowned in floor length yellow peau-de-sole, empire style with matching head-dress, and shoes. The two bridesmaids, Fern MacPhee, cousin of the bride and Lynn Loftus were identical floor length gowns of yellow and green print with yellow head-dress and matching shoes. Their flowers were cascades of yellow and white daisies.

The groom was attended by Wayne Grey of Brackley, and ushers were George Vessey and John Augustin, brothers-in-law of the groom.

Mrs. Moore chose for her daughter's wedding a suit of turquoise lace with matching hat and white accessories. Mrs. MacPherson was attired in blue and white print with matching hat and white accessories.

The reception following the ceremony was held at the Confederation Centre, Dorothy Baxter, friend of the bride, circulated the guest book.

A rehearsal party was held on the evening before the wedding at the home of Mrs. MacPherson, the groom's mother.

For travelling the bride donned a light blue two-piece boucle dress with blue picture hat to match, white accessories, and a corsage of pink roses.

Out of town guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. L.N. Campbell, sister and brother-in-law of the groom, from Vancouver; and Rev. and Mrs. Donald S. Moore, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, from St. Catharines, Ont.

The bride and groom spent their honeymoon in St. Catharines and Niagara Falls and are now residing at 9 Birchwood Street, Charlottetown. The groom is employed by CFCY, and the bride by Confederation Life.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM MACPHEE

Picturesque Old St. John's Scene Of Belfast Wedding

St. John's Presbyterian Church, Belfast, P.E.I., was the scene of an August wedding when Norma-Jean, daughter of Mrs. George Docherty and the late Mr. Docherty, Pinette, P.E.I., was united in marriage to William Murdoch only son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon MacPhee, Hopefield, P.E.I.

Baskets of gladiolus formed an attractive setting for the occasion. The guest pews were marked with white satin bows and centered with sweat peas.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Donald Nicholson, Mr. John MacWilliams as organist accompanied John MacWilliams as he sang "O Perfect Love" before the ceremony and "Happy The Home When God Was There" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Layton, wore a floor length sheath gown of peau de soie with bateau neckline and lily point sleeves. A chapel train was attached to a matching belt fastened at the front with a bow and her sister shoulder length veil of silk illusion was held in place by an organza rosette headpiece. She carried a long cascade of pink roses and white lily of the valley. Her jewellery was a single strand of cultured pearls, a gift of the groom.

Mrs. Fred Brown, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, Janet Roper, and Mrs. Alan Hubley, sister of the groom, as bridesmaids, wore identical floor length gowns of pink peau de soie. Their headpieces were rosettes of the same material. Matching shoes and short white gloves completed their costumes. They carried nosegays of pink and white carnations with white streamers. The flower girl was Earthy Mutch, niece of the bride who wore a full skirted dress of white peau de soie with pink sash. Her headpiece was pink rosette and she carried a basket of mixed flowers.

The best man was Sinclair MacMillan and ushers were George Docherty, brother of the bride and Alan Hubley, brother-in-law of the groom.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of aqua nylon chiffon over tulle with white picture hat and matching accessories. Her corsage was of white roses.

Mrs. MacPhee, mother of the groom, chose a two-piece blue silk shantung dress, with matching hat and gloves. Her corsage was of white roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Hillside Inn, Montague for approximately 75 guests.

Rev. Mr. Nicholson asked the blessing and proposed a toast to the bride. Anna Stewart circulated the guest book.

For a honeymoon trip to points of interest in the Maritime the bride wore a pink wool walking suit with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

MARY HAWORTH

His Passion For Golf Is Ruining Family Life

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is a good man, he doesn't drink or chase women. But leisure to him means golf; he is golf obsessed. Two, three, four times a week, also on holidays, he plays golf. Holidays are golf days to him.

As you know, golf is expensive, including club dues, etc. So even if there was time for the children and me, there would be no money for family recreation. What he has spent on golf since we married could have refurbished our house several times.

He thinks nothing of leaving the children and me to play golf. Meals have to wait on daddy ("he's playing golf"); in fact our whole lives are conformed to his golf.

At first, I tried reasoning with him; but that is out. We can't afford psychiatry. And it's no

ELLEN'S DIARY

Nature's Wonders Give Boys Much To Ponder

Now the two boys of the house across the lane have settled into the pleasant routine of the schooldays. They have their out-goings, the partings with Scamp and the kit-cats, and the incomings which renew the former friendships with them. Scampie barks that welcome then, which brings smiles to young faces. Our doors open use appealing to the family doctor. He golfs, too.

I want my husband to be happy. I really do. And I also want to accept what is, and be grateful for the good we have. But I am becoming increasingly nervous, with knots in my stomach as if I had swallowed golf balls.

The situation is so tense that my husband answers me sharply when I am around, which drives me further into my shell, unable to be companionable when we are alone together.

I've tried to hide my resentment from the children, but they are catching on. Just recently our eldest remarked, "Daddy's idea of summer-togetherness is sliced tomatoes with mayonnaise."

To come to the point, my husband's golf is fraying our relationship until I honestly can't feel responsive at any time, knowing he puts golf ahead of me and, even more, the children. They haven't many more years at home. What will be left when they are gone?

Please remember, I've said my husband is a good man. Help me not to care about the problem described.

DEAR V. S.: Let's put it this way: Your husband is a good man but severely limited in his aptitude for human relations. And it is his limitation on this score, rather than his slavish preoccupation with golf, that is driving you up the wall with a sense of accelerating frustration and outrage.

His interminable golfing amounts to escapism. It is his way of hiding out, plausibly, from the proper requirements of a foursquare marriage.

In devoting all his spare time to golf, he is wearing blinders to the rejected psychological needs of his wife and children, who droop despondently like plants in a drought, for lack of companionable considerate husband father care.

However, despite his unmindful air, he isn't fooling himself, after all. At heart he knows he is playing truant. And for that reason your submissive air of bottled-up distress shrieks accusingly at his conscience, hostile and, in consequence, outright rejecting in company, when sharp words will squelch you most, without giving you a chance to get to the nub of the rancour.

As for how to cope, my view is, get true perspective on his shrunken emotional constitution. As one can't make a silk purse of a sow's ear, neither is it realistic to expect a manly, generous, responsible, resourceful husband father performance from him. Psychologically he is pigmy-size, involuntarily in flight from family closeness, as an insupportable pressure.

When you digest this fact, you'll find it easier to adjust to what is, at least to the extent of no longer feeling, furiously, that he is giving the best of himself to outsiders.

Actually he gives outsiders even less of himself than he gives to you. His problem is, he has so little self to give. M.H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

and closes, and a pair of cats, the young and older, pad in to be fed, though at the time there is no sign of their benefactors, other than the rush of feet that takes them home.

Peter is fitting himself nicely into the schoolday's schedule. He comes by with his text, and work-book.

"Put on your glasses" he will advise his grandfather. They sit closely in the old armchair, while Peter gets on with this interest, which, after all, is the great beginning of the book-learning he is to continue up the years. Alex listens in too, air somewhat lofty as he regards them from the height of the Grade V year.

"Am I doing this the right way, Alex?" he will query, in tones a little anxious. Then he smiles happily at his elder brother's nod of approval. Alex too meets his schooldays without concern. Books are his favorite realm. They are his best friends.

"I just know this is going to be my most interesting school-year yet" he said this evening, homing to meet such assignments as were set for his tomorrow.

Nice incidentals, nature provides for them these days, to see to wonder over, to study.

Today it was a young heron, a neat bluish-gray bird that passed so close we could feel the air of its beating wings" as it rose from the stream beside the lane's bridge. Dragonflies too were a study, fearful insects by hearsay.

"Will they really sew up people's eyes, if they catch up with them?" Peter questioned anxiously.

"No indeed! And they never try to catch up with anyone" we said. "They are interesting creatures, fast in flight, and in shape, have you noticed, they are much like a tiny plane?"

"Well I heard a boy say they would! He called them Devil's Darning-Needles. And that doesn't sound too good, now does it?"

Now the combine has been serviced, and today a first reaping was done. Not however on this farm but at Rob's (elder son of this house) whose farm lies next to this on the north.... And when we came on an outing with the family to town this afternoon, we passed by fields, that having been reaped by a binder, now in an engaging scene had the sheaves arranged in old-time ranks of stocks.

"A good crop there" James nodded. "Now, an extra 'good one' he smiled. And a good day this has been, to which at the clock's warning, we must now write, "The End."

Until tomorrow -- Diary -- Good-night....
