Coronach for Glenaladale.

Written (partly) many years ago by Vick Dhonnail Nan Ord.

I.
Decended from a Princely Line of chieftains proud and high,
Macdonald of Glenaladale has breathed his latest sigh!
No more by robbery and wrong, and calumny opprest,
My injured friend, in far Quebec, has entered on his rest.

II.
And Oh! my inmost soul exclaims, ere yet his term was o'er,
That he and I had met our foes, with target and claymore!
Had seen one hour of victory, like that of Prestonpans,
Where Whiggish Treason dared not stand before our Father's Clans!

III.
Our battle and our cause are lost! Democracy prevails;
The next to him who wins the fight is he who bravely fails!
And THIS I say, and will maintain so long as I'm alive,
That Wrong and Robbery prevailed in 1875.

IV.
And now, my valued friend, FAREWELL!
Glenaladale adieu!
With all thy faults, to many a good and noble impulse true!
For all thy faults I plead the words of Heaven's incarnate Throne,—
"Let him who stands without a sin be first to cast a stone!"

A REMARKABLE POEM TO WHICH THIRTY-EIGHT POETS CONTRIBUTE A LINE EACH.

The following very remarkable little poem is a contribution to the San Francisco Times from the pen of Mr. H. A. Deming. The reader will see that each line is a quotation from some one of the standard authors of England and America. This is the result of years of laborious search among the voluminous writings of thirty-eight leading poets of the past and present. The number of each line refers to its author below:

1. Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour?
2. Life's short summer, man's a flower,
3. By turns we catch the vital breath and die.
4. The cradle and the tomb, alas! so nigh.
5. To be is better far than not to be,
6. Though all men's lives may seem a tragedy;
7. But light careers speak when mighty griefs are dumb;
8. The bottom is but shallow whence they come.
9. Your fate is but the common fate of all;
10. Unmingled joys here no man can befall.
11. Nature to each allots its proper share;
12. Fortune makes folly her particular care.
13. Custom does often reason overrule.
14. And throws a cruel sunshine on a fool.
15. Live well; how long or short, permit to heaven;
16. They who forgive most shall be most forgiven.
17. Sin may be clasped so close we cannot see its face—
18. Vile intercourse where virtue has no place.
19. Then keep each passion down, and however dear,
20. Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear.
21. Her sensual snares let faithless pleasure lay,
22. With craft and skill to ruin and betray.
23. Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise.
24. We masters grow of all that we despise.
25. Oh, then renounce that impious self-esteem!
26. Riches have wings and grandeur is a dream.
27. Think not ambition wise because 'tis brave;
28. The paths of glory, leads but to the grave.
29. What is ambition? 'Tis a glorious cheat—
30. Only destructive to the brave and great.
31. What's all the gaudy glitter of a crown?
32. The way of bliss lies not on beds of down.
33. How long we live not years but actions tell—
34. That man lives twice who lives the first life well.
35. Make, then, while yet you may, your God your friend,
36. Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend,
37. The trust that's given guard, and to yourself be just.
38. For live we how we can, die we must.

The present occupant, Mr. James Roxburgh, has been tenant of the farm for the long period of nine-and-thirty years. In consequence of his blindness, and his extraordinary activity notwithstanding this sore physical defect, Mr. Roxburgh was widely known all over the country. Like other farmers, he felt most severely the long succession of bad seasons which we have had, and these were all the more felt because of his late and every elevated locality. That, however, which brought the crowing calamity upon him was a terrible flood some years ago, which destroyed several thousands of stonew of hay, and much of his other crop, besides sanding up his best pasture, when, after eating it, his stock of ewes died almost out. In consequence of his falling fully a year behind with his rent the proprietor—Sir Reginald Cathcart—in right of his hypothec, sequestered his stock and crop, when Mr. Roxburgh was forced to seek the protection of the Bankruptcy Court, and hence the sale. Now, after a long and brave battle, Mr. Roxburgh, aged, blind, and penniless, has to go forth to the world and its cold charities, although he has the deepest sympathy of all who know his case, and who have long witnessed his manful efforts to ward the ruin off.

Morgan's Fate.

REVELATIONS BY THE LATE THURLOW WEED—HOW MORGAN WAS DISPOSED OF—TAKEN OUT IN NIAGARA RIVER AND DROWNED—THE SECRET CAREFULLY PRESERVED—MORGAN'S MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Thurlow Weed in September last made an affidavit, which has only now been published, referring to the fate of Morgan, who exposed the secrets of Freemasonry. He says, speaking of some years ago:—"Colonel Simeon B. Jewett, of Clarkson, Major Samuel B. Iron, of Lewiston, and John Whitney, of Rochester, passed an evening at his house. In the course of the evening of conversation, Colonel Jewett turned to Whitney with emphasis and said:—"John what if you make a clean breast of it! Whitney looked enquiringly at Barton, who added, 'Go ahead,' and Whitney then related in detail the history of Morgan's abduction and fate. The idea of suppressing Morgan's intended exposure of the secrets of Freemasonry was first suggested by a man by the name of Johns. It was discussed in lodges at Batavia, Leroy, and Rochester. Johns suggested that Morgan should be separated from Miller, and placed on a farm in Canada West. For this purpose he was taken to Niagara and placed in the magazine of the fort until arrangements for settling him in Canada were completed, but the Canadian Masons disappointed them. After several meetings of the lodge in Canada, opposite Fort Niagara, a refusal to have anything to do with Morgan left his 'kidnappers' greatly perplexed. Opportunely a Royal Arch Chapter was installed at Lewiston, and the occasion brought a large number of enthusiastic Masons together. At a banquet the chaplain—Rev. F. H. Cummings, of Rochester—was called on for a toast. He responded with peculiar emphasis and in the language of their ritual:—"The enemies of our Order, may they find a grave six feet deep, six feet long, and six feet due east and west." Immediately after that toast, which was received with great enthusiasm, Col. William King, an officer in our war of 1812, and then a member from Niagara County, called Whitney, of Rochester, Howard, of Buffalo, Chubbuck, of Lewiston, and Garside, of Canada, went out of the room and into a carriage furnished by Major Barton. They were driven to Fort Niagara, repaired to the magazine, and informed Morgan that the arrangements for sending him to Canada were completed and that his family would soon follow him. Morgan embarked in the boat, which was rowed to the mouth of the river, where a rope was wound around his body to each end of which a sinker was attached. Morgan was then thrown overboard. He grasped the gunwale of the boat conclusively. Garside in forcing Morgan to relinquish his hold was severely bitten. Whitney, in concluding his narrative, said he was now relieved from a heavy load that for four years he had not heard the window rattle of any other noise at night without thinking the sheriff was after him. Col. Jewett, looking fixedly at Whitney, said, 'Weed can hang you now.' 'But he won't,' was Whitney's prompt reply. Of course a secret thus confided to me was inviolably kept, and 29 years afterward, while attending a National Republican Convention at Chicago, John Whitney, who then resided there, called to say that he wanted me to write out what he once told me about Morgan's fate, to be signed by him in the presence of witnesses, and to be sealed up and published after his death. I promised to do so before leaving Chicago. There was no leisure, however, during the setting of the Convention, and even before its final adjournment I had forgotten what I told Whitney. I went to Europe, and while in London wrote a letter to Whitney asking him to get Alex. B. Williams, then a resident of Chicago, to do what I had so unparadoxically neglected. That letter reached Chicago one week after Whitney's death, closing the last and only chance for the revelation of that important event." Mr. Weed closes by a declaration of the motives which actuated him throughout the whole affair, and speaks of those who were associated with him in those troubled days.
