AN AMERICAN DIPLOMAT.

He Broke Through Court Etiquette and Found Favor With the Queen.

Mr. Andrew Stevenson of Virginia had been the American minister to England only a few months when the young Princess Victoria became the queen. His contemporaries took great pleasure in hearing his experiences on that occasion, so fortunate for England and the world.

Mr. Stevenson was duly presented to King William IV by his predecessor. As he backed away from the presence of majesty he observed a small group standing near the door through which he must leave the drawing room. Two ladies, evidently a mother and daughter, attended by several gentlemen, stood apart, neglected by the crowd. Mr. Stevenson saw that the young girl was looking directly at him, and bowed courteously to her, which salutation was returned by the little party, the two ladies smiling pleasantly.

When they were fairly out of hearing, Mr. Stevenson's companion informed him that the two ladies were the Duchess of Kent and the Princess Victoria, and that he had committed a great blunder in saluting them, since it was contrary to court etiquette to acknowledge the heir in the presence of the sovereign. The gallant Virginian, however, stoutly protested that no cast iron rule could excuse a gentleman for incivility to a lady.

When the next drawing room was held, Mr. Stevenson saw with satisfaction that the young princess and her party were all looking away from him, so that his courtesy need not be tired. But as he approached them the Duchess of Kent remarked, in an audible tone, "Victoria, the American minister." The young princess turned quickly with a glance of recognition, and again smilingly acknowledged Mr. Stevenson's bow.

Not many weeks after this the youthful princess became the queen and showed her appreciation of American civility by including Mr. Stevenson's name in the list of first guests invited to Windsor castle. When the visit took place, Mr. Stevenson found himself seated near the queen, to whom he talked as he would have done to any other pleasant young girl. The courtiers present exchanged glances of horror at seeing him guilty of such a faux pas. With them, unless royalty spoke first, silence was preserved.

The young sovereign regarded Mr. Stevenson's attention more favorably and invited him to ride with her the next morning. He told with much humor how it tried his mettle to keep up with the active English horsewoman, and how, when she leaped her horse over a five barred gate, he dared not follow, but rode around some distance on an easier road and found himself completely distanced by the queen and her immediate attendants. —Harper's Round Table.

SHE TOOK LEGAL MEASURES.

How the Judge's Daughter Detained the Young Man.

The judge's daughter was looking just as guileless as it was possible for a girl to look, but then the state of mind of the judge's daughter cannot always be judged by her looks.

"That young man," said the judge, 'seemed determined to hang on all night."

The judge's daughter merely smiled.

"Didn't he hear me stamping up and down the hallway?" demanded the judge.

"I don't see how he could have helped it," replied the judge's daughter.

"But he still hung on," persisted the judge.

"I am afraid that was my fault, father," answered the judge's daughter. "But if you will only consent to look at the matter from a legal point of view I think you will agree that I did exactly what was proper."

"From a legal point of view!" ejaculated the old gentleman in astonishment.

"Certainly," she answered. "Just take the case home to yourself. Suppose you had entered into a limited partnership agreement with a man, and you thought you detected a desire on his part to get away in haste. Wouldn't you take out some kind of a writ to stop him?"

"You mean a writ of ne exeat, I suppose," suggested the judge.

"Is that the kind of a writ that prevents any one from going away?" inquired the judge's daughter.

"That's just what it is."

"Then that's what I was thinking of," she said. "He heard you stamping up and down the hall, and he betrayed a most extraordinary desire to get away, but I detained him by a writ of knee excat."—Chicago Post.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

The next transit of Venus occurs in 2004.

The tail of the great comet of 1843 was 200,000,000 miles long.

The normal temperature of man is about 98½ degrees; of the snail, 76; oyster, 82; porpoise, 100; rat, cat and ox, 102; sheep, 104; hog, 105; chicken, 111.

Dr. George F. Shrady says in The Forum that though consumption is contagious the chances of infection to a healthy person are so slight as not to merit mention, much less cause alarm.

CLASSIFIES THE SEX.

An English paper is responsible for the following:

And in the beginning women were divided into seven kinds—viz:

First.—The obstinate woman, who would attempt to cross the Atlantic in a bandbox.

Second.—The patient woman, who will roast an ox with a burning glass.

Third.—The curious woman, who would like to handle a rainbow to see if it is all wool and whether the colors go through.

Fourth.—The vulgar woman, who resembles a spider trying to spin silk.

Fifth.—The cautious woman, who writes promises with water on a slate.

Sixth.—The extravagant woman, who burns a candle to look for a lost match.

Seventh.—And the good woman from whom writers and painters take their idea of angels.

We can forgive the insolence of the first six on account of the truth contained in the last.

SIMPLE SALVE.

FASHION'S FANCIES.

Cool looking ecru linens will be in fashionable favor in coat and short eton suits of various kinds.

Cobwebby india silk muslins are figured with shadowy leaves, vines and flowers in natural colors.

Victorian corsages, glove fitting, almost seamless and laced up the back, will be very general this season among elegant evening toilets for slender, youthful women.

Flax colored linen traveling costumes are chosen by many fashionable women. The holland jacket bodices open in front over a stylish embroidered vest. The gored skirt is about four yards wide and fits closely on the front and sides.

All the latest summer hats and bonnets are more or less transparent. If of straw, they are of the zephyr variety, light and cool, and countless new midsummer models are made of shirred and accordion plaited gauze, tulle, lisse, india mull and similar airy textures.

The beautiful shades of green appear this summer in great variety. Some of the new tints are exquisitely delicate and beautiful, and combinations of green with certain shades of blue, violet, amber brown and many shades of red are noted among Paris gowns and millinery.

The skirts of dainty flowered and striped French lawns and cambrics for morning wear are tucked half their length, finished with a deep hem only or trimmed with many rows of very narrow ruffles, headed by a bias band, with a piping each side of plain lawn the color of the figure in the goods.

Muslin gowns, being exclusively hot weather gowns, are cut down in the neck, sometimes merely in a point, but oftener in a deep and wide square shape—a la pompadour. This opening is then filled in with some pretty transparent net or muslin, plain or accordion plaited, and the space framed with a fall of lace or a narrow plated ruche.—New York Post.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Lottie Collins is again appearing at the Palace, London. She has three new songs.

De Wolf Hopper went to the top of Pike's peak a few days ago and recited "Casey at the Bat."

Ada Rehan's health is not good. She expects to recover her strength during her vacation abroad.

Minnie Palmer recently began an engagement at the Matinee theater, London, appearing in "My Sweetheart."

The dramatization of Anthony Hope's "The Heart of Princess Osra" will be produced in New York early next season.

Madeline Bouton has gone to London, Paris and Ostend. She will return to appear in Max Bleiman's production of "La Juanita."

Miss Maud Agnes Palmer of Boston and Oswald Yorke, who were with the Willard company last season, were married recently.

A fastidious London critic complains because at a performance of "As You Like It" the name of Sylvius appeared on the playbill as "Sirloin."

Harry B. Smith is hard at work on the book of a new opera for Camille d'Arville, based upon "Peg Woffington." The music will be by Victor Herbert.

Mme. Odilon, who is at the head of the company of the Vienna Volks theater, which is about to visit London, has been called the Austrian Rejane.

George Alexander will produce next season in London "Change Alley," a play concerned with the south sea bubble, by Louis Parker and Murray Carson.

It is said that "Secret Service" will be kept on the London stage for a long run, perhaps at the Criterion theater, which has not been doing any too well lately.

Word comes from London that Daniel Frohman has secured in London a new play by Edward Rose, called "The Days of Old," for the Lyceum theater, New York.

SOUR GRAPES.

Don't say of a woman that she is "thin." Say she is "delicate."

When a woman gets after a man, he is only safe when in his bathtub.

Every schoolteacher claims she was the best scholar in her class when she went to school.

The oldest bunko game on earth is the game of matrimony, and there are always young people willing to play it.

A woman really has no good luck in marrying unless she marries a man on his deathbed and he leaves her his life insurance.

When you remember how a woman exaggerates the love she has for a man, it is not surprising that she exaggerates her woes after she marries him.

Whenever we have an uncontrollable prejudice against a girl, we can usually trace it to the fact that somewhere some time we saw a picture of her showing her teeth.

After a woman has passed 30 she should not allow herself to be worked by people who mention her "winning ways." Winning ways and old age do not go hand in hand.—Atchison Globe.

NOVELTIES.

For travelers are provided cut glass soap boxes with silver mountings.

Silver receptacles for tooth and nail brushes come in round, oval and square forms.

Out of the ordinary are paper knives having broad gilt blades and handles of crystal decorated with gilt wire.

Attractive Limoges enamels on silver and copper include inkstands, vases, plaques and small cabinet pieces.

Numbered with novelties are Lincoln pitchers, so named because they are decorated with panel pictures of Lincoln.

The demand for bicycling addenda is adequately catered for by compact boxes fitted with flask and sandwich case and having a mirror set in the cover.—Jewelers' Circular.

SPECTACLES.

Over twenty-five years I have been in the Spectacle bud iness and during that time have fitted hundreds and hundres of persons. Some had put off getting glasses so long that the could not see a large 4 inch letter A without going within 2 o 3 feet of it, and might have gone blind if they had put off getting glasses much longer. Others have been fitted or rather misfitted, with wrong glasses by travellers, and charged a great deal more than they ought to have been. This year our traveller, Mr. C. H. White, intends calling on parties at their homes in the country, to test eyes and show samples of our goods. Should he call on you I bespeak for him your favorable consideration, and any order you may giv him will be filled as soon as possible and guaranteed by me Glasses can also be exchanged at the store, CAMERON BLOCK City, if after a trial they do not prove as satisfactory as you wish.
