ELLEN'S DIARY

This Is The Day To Tidy Things Up At The Stables

"We're getting a bit of a snow-fall" Mack eldest son of the house across the lane offered, first visitor over our threshold this morning. His 16 years, we can appreciate, gives him nice privileges. He is on equal footing now with the adults at the farm. He is welcomed as another in the family licensed to handle machines on the roads. Though like other farm-boys, who have been operating machines on the fields ever since they could move levers, he takes this added freedom sensibly and as a matter of course. And because since a little lad, his father has shared with him the problems of the farming, and given him a working knowledge of its operation and economics, his responsibilities along these lines have increased. He has always respected the fact that on farms, the living must come basically from the soil, and in order to gain this the fields must be well farmed, and the livestock faithfully tended. His 4-H training too through the years of his membership has, and is, contributing no small share to agricultural knowledge and understanding of this boy of the farm. "But that Alex..." he will

MARY HAWORTH

Explanation Of Beliefs Corrected By Brethren

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your very perceptive answer to the letter you received from the Unitarian housewife, T. R., who stated that Unitarians don't believe in God, was read with great interest in our Mid West area by Unitarians as well as other persons. As a member of the Unitarian Church for the past 18 years I realize that many latitudes of belief and so-called non-belief are housed under the roofs of Unitarian churches. But any member who would take it upon himself, or herself, to flatter Unitarianism and Unitarians in one final statement has a very superficial concept of Unitarian beliefs.

It is no surprise to me that her neighbors would reject her if her presentation of Unitarianism to them has been as shallow and ill-founded as her letter to you would indicate.

Thank you for your suggestion to her, as well as to your audience generally, to read some light-giving literature on the subject. Specifically: "Mind your lane. And pretty, we decided when we watched a pair of visiting lads home beneath the yards' lights. They went in single file—sheep-fashion—the little one ahead, over to their own door. And across the lawn, and beneath the little rose trellis and beyond, were left the shuffled tracks in the fall which otherwise lies pure white and unbroken.

"There's some frost tonight, Ellen" James says, laying fresh sticks on the fire. . . hot milk, coffee, tea - toast, cookies or as the children say "a piece of plain bread and butter," what, the thought comes, alone or in a combination, will insure the sweetest slumber? What take this pair along flowery paths of dreams?

"Yes, it's fairly cool" James continues. "I believe I should go to the stables and close some of the windows. . . And then we will have a bite of something" he smiled.

Until tomorrow ---- Diary -- Good-night. . .

If I Differ" (Sheed and Ward), an exchange of letters between Betty Mills, Unitarian egghead housewife and professional writer Lucile Hasley, a convert to Roman Catholicism.

May I suggest, further, that she read or reread some of the basic statements on Unitarianism-Universalism contained in the Constitution and By-Laws of the Unitarian Universalist Association. Also, some of the simple straightforward pamphlets and booklets written to answer inquiries about the movement - to serve as an introduction to Unitarianism.

These are available at any Unitarian Universalist church, or can be obtained by writing to the Church of the Larger Fellowship, Unitarian Universalist, 25 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Such reading might inspire her to a few saving second thoughts before she again takes up her pen or crusade, self-righteously. Sincerely, C. J.

DEAR C. J.: I am hopeful that your supplementary suggestions will be helpful to TR, in terms of showing her why and how to phase-out her own mistaken contribution to the clash of views that is isolating her from amiable fellowship with her neighbors, an experience she longs for, since forfeiting it.

To date, my reading-acquaintance with Unitarian doctrine consists of (1) the Mills-Hasley book cited above, and (2) the late A. Powell Davies' brochure titled "Unitarianism: What is it?" (1957) edition, in which he states, concisely: "It (Unitarianism) separates itself from no company of believers, whether Christian or otherwise, except as they deny its claim for freedom."

This brochure is (or was) distributed by the Division of Publications, American Unitarian Association, 25 Beacon St., Boston 8, Mass. - the same mailing address you've given, in fact, M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The recent letter from TR, the Unitarian housewife involved in sectarian dispute with her neighbors, was misleading concerning the Unitarian Church.

She writes "As you may know" we Unitarians don't believe in God. For this reason we do not pray!

The Unitarian Church is a liberal church. It doesn't have a fixed creed that one must accept and follow. Many Unitarians pray and believe in God, I am sure; though not required to.

We sing hymns, have silent meditation, a sermon by the minister (with a doctor's degree). But there is no law or rule that prohibits one from praying, and believing in God if one wishes to.

Many Unitarians are highly intelligent persons who seek to better conditions for humanity. Each is free to think for himself; and, as in other denominations, there are all types, wise, foolish and intermediate. Sincerely, F. R.
