

Cole-MacKay Wedding At New London Manse

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Presbyterian Manse, New London, on Wednesday, October 25, at 2:30 p.m., when Laura Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert MacKay, Graham's Road, and Emma Isabelle Bearsto, daughter of George Cole and the late Mr. Cole of Stanley Bridge were united in marriage. Rev. L. D. Bartlett performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride chose for her wedding, a suit of teal blue with dusky pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Miss Betty Coles, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. She wore a suit of grey tweed with pink and black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

MARY HAWORTH Secrecy Brings Its Own Hurts

Dear Mary Haworth: In 1952 I was secretly married to a wonderful boy. We wanted to keep it secret for certain reasons. Less than three months later he was killed in Korea.

Our families had known that we were engaged, but none knew that we were married — except the couple who attended us. They were related to Bob. I'll call him. Now Bob's mother is very ill and has little time left; and this couple feels that I should tell her before she passes on. What do you think I should do?

I've always used my maiden name, never thinking I would have to disclose our secret. However, there have been times when I wanted to, times when I grieved alone, because there was nobody to turn to.

I am in my middle twenties and have never remarried, but if I should, I realize this would have to be told. I would appreciate your comment, M.H.

It seems to be instinctive in human nature that a mother (even the best of them), involuntarily regards a son's wife as a rival in the field of affections — at least in her spontaneous unconscious first emotional reaction to his choice of a life partner.

DOCTOR'S SLANT If the general idea is to atone for the secrecy, by confessing the elopement (and the reasons for it) to her on her deathbed, I think it might be more considerate just to leave it unsaid — and let her notion of the past rest undisturbed.

However, if your hope is to ease her going, by sharing with her a sense of mutuality, in remembering Bob — well, in that case I feel you should consult her doctor, and be guided by his confidential opinion, as to whether such candor would be a tonic, or a shock, to her at this time. M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: I have a severe mental depression, one has received psychiatric help at a nearby hospital, and after two weeks of intensive physical and mental examinations, was told that she alone can pull herself out of this depression.

I recall reading of a similar case in your column; and you mentioned a certain book that outlined a specialist's theories of self-help, for persons in that condition. For the benefit of my friend, and possibly others in your audience, will you state again the title and author of the book? Thank you. P.V.

BLAZES TRAIL Dear P.V.: Probably you refer to the late Dr. Abraham A. Low's book: "Mental Health Through Will Training." It is printed by the Christopher Publishing House, Boston, Mass.
