There has been an interesting mixture of coat lines in the autumn and winter collections shown by the important Society of London Fashion Designers. The bulky swagger-type coat is less important than it was last year, the straight coat has returned, and there is a great feeling for fitted, redingote styles. Some of the last mentioned were shown for formal afternoon and evening wear and were emphasized by their brilliant linings. An effective entrance for the mannequin is to walk demurely into a salon in a black velvet coat with a very full skirt, and then suddenly throw one side open to reveal a scarlet lining so vivid that it makes the spectators almost blink. A good many of the short full coats worn over suits are also lined in this way, and since there are signs that the straight and narrow silhouette may be giving way to the full skirt and tight fitting jacket by the middle of summer, 1952, it will be interesting to see how women feel about these very full skirted jackets this autumn.

THE IRRITABLE COLON - LARGE BOWEL

While "itis" at the end of a word means "inflammation of," in the case of colitis (inflammation of the lining of the colon) it really means irritation of, rather than the true inflammation with temperature and pus which is called ulcerative colitis.

Most of these cases of simple colitis do not result in severe illness, nevertheless it is a mental and physical hazard as the patient is troubled with diarrhoea at times and other times by spastic constipation.

While infection and eating rough or raw foods do irritate the colon and cause symptoms mentioned above, physicians are now agreed that the great majority of cases of simple or mucous colitis are caused by emotional disturbances.

In American Medical Journal, Dr. T. P. Almy reports experimental studies on 50 healthy persons and 100 persons with irritable colon who were studied by direct observation of the colon by means of an instrument (kymoscope) which records the pressure in a rubber or latex balloon in the lower colon at the same time as the person or patient is interviewed concerning his feelings and observation of expressions of emotions.

If these emotional individuals can, from their religion or philosophy, develop calmness of spirit, their colitis will disappear.

Make Spare Time Pay

Wife Should Use Lonely Hours For Constructive Activities

MONA

ANSWER: A change of routine as drastic as yours does entail a period of readjustment that seems very difficult at first. You will soon get used to it.

As the initial step in getting the problem licked, view the situation in a different light. Just because you aren't on the same household timetable as your neighbors doesn't mean you must be lonely.

A new activity will make the hours fly and midnight will come as soon for you as it did for Cinderella. For instance, learn a new handicraft. If you don't already sew, learn to! Or add crocheting or knitting to your household arts.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By an Island Farmer's Wife

"Oh, there's nothing new, Ellen—nothing at all. It's just the same old round!" a farm-wife of our acquaintance commented with a smile, obviously a bit weary, the other afternoon in reply to our query: "Well, what's new?"

We had stopped at that farm briefly with James who must consult the farmer there about a matter in connection with our farming. And leaving the two in the yard pleasantly engrossed in their conference we had come indoors to admire the profusion of bloom on the plants in the sun-porch...

"No," she said as with a keen eye on the truck, we seated ourselves for a moment "though I did hear that Mrs. ... is not quite so well today. In fact the Dr.'s car was there this afternoon. And, but I guess you've heard it, Ellen, Mrs. ... has her new baby? Yes, she nodded obviously pleased as its every daughter of Eve and a like event, "Isn't it good that it's here, and that all's well? A girl this time." And we saw her eye sweep the stretch of road below the lawn.

"And? Oh, I've been at this and that... preserving and canning and pickling, sewing a little, tending the fowl—and the children, helping too with the milking these evenings of the harvest. And it keeps me so busy, honestly I often wish there were two of me. And truthfully, Ellen, it does get monotonous doing the same old turns, and seeing the same old sights until one wears out of it. And" she added with a wistful expression, "there are so many lovely places and scenes abroad—they say."

The September sun beamed its blessing on the late blossoming phlox on the lawn, and we counted Continued on page 9

The Stars Say - -

For Tomorrow

THE luminary radiations are stimulating influences for ambitious endeavors. The whole pattern of existence may bring a new sense of meaning when the unrestrained scope of special rights and privileges is realized. By dint of hard work, concentration and endeavor former idle dreams should come to a final culmination.

If It Is Your Birthday Those whose birthday it is should put all pessimistic views points away on the shelf. Minor details coming up for settlement may seem full of subtle factors and unintentional hurts. Exert the utmost care in keeping a clear perspective. Be courageous and confident, but not impetuous.

A child born on this day has intriguing traits of character. Eloquent, ardent, and active, it will go far in any line in which it has free rein.

Day After Tomorrow

MEDITATION and contemplation should be the general tenor of the day as the conflicting stellar rays indicate urges for out of the ordinary desires. While this variety goes a long way in breaking up a routine, to give in to these impulses entirely would be something only to be regretted later; think first.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves involved in unusual situations that will call for utmost tact and diplomacy in handling. New duties and responsibilities should be accepted cheerfully, but proceed cautiously. For subtle forces lie beneath the surface. A child born on this day will need to develop uncanny mental faculties in order to extricate itself from the tight spots caused by a too adventuresome and daring spirit.
